Orelle

Disciple of the Fates

Class & Level
Fighter 2

Sub-Class
Hoplite Soldier

Race
Thylean Siren

Background
Sailor

Alignment Neutral Good

Player Name
Indy

Proficiency Bonus +2

Initiative +4

Racial Traits

- Wavering Emotions (SR/LR):
  Joyful
  Flight 30 ft.
  Sad
  Songs of Sorrow
- Enthralling Voice:
  Advantage on Performance and Persuasion checks made with your voice.
  Hold breath up to 1 hour
- Songs of Sorrow
  Charm Person (1/SR)
  Enthrall (Lvl 3, 1/SR)
  Hold Person (Lvl 5, 1/SR)
  CHA Spell Save DC 13
  Targets must hear you

Speed walking 30ft / flying 40ft

Inspi.

Actions

- Dory: +6 hit, 1d6+4 piercing
- Throw Dory: +6 hit, 20/60, 1d6+4 piercing
- Light Crossbow: +6 hit, 80/320, 1d8+4 piercing

Bonus Action

- Second Wind (1/SR): Heal 1d10 + fighter lvl.

Reaction

- Oppertunity Attack: Melee attack against a creature leaving your reach.
- Hoplite Fighting Style: Shield required.
  When a creature makes a melee attack against an ally within 5 ft. of you, make a melee opportunity attack against that creature.

Other

- Action Surge (1/SR,LR): On your turn, take one additional action.

Strength 10 +0

Dexterity 18 +4

Constitution 14 +2

Inteligence 08 -1

Wisdom 10 +0

Charisma 16 +3

Hit Dice 2d10

Death Saves
Succes
Failiure

Fame

Happy 19
flight / studded leather / shield

Sad 20
songs of sorrow / shield / half plate

AC

Skills

- (•) +6 Acrobatics (Dex)
- ( ) +0 Animal Handling (Wis)
- ( ) -1 Arcana (Int)
- (•) +2 Athletics (Str)
- ( ) +3 Deception (Cha)
- ( ) -1 History (Int)
- ( ) +0 Insight (Wis)
- (•) +5 Intimidation (Cha)
- ( ) -1 Investigation (Int)
- ( ) +0 Medicine (Wis)
- ( ) -1 Nature (Int)
- (•) +2 Perception (Wis)
- ( ) +3 Performance (Cha)
- ( ) +3 Persuasion (Cha)
- ( ) -1 Religion (Int)
- ( ) +4 Slight of Hand (Dex)
- ( ) +4 Stealth (Dex)
- ( ) +0 Survival (Wis)

Saving Throws

- (•) +3 Strength
- ( ) +5 Dexterity
- (•) +5 Constitution
- ( ) +0 Intelligence
- ( ) +1 Wisdom
- ( ) +4 Charisma

Other Proficiencies & Languages

Languages: Common, Celestial
Armor: All armor, shields
Weapons: Simple + martial
Tools: Navigator's tools
Vehicles: Water

Hit Point Maximum 22
Current Hit Points

Temporary Hit Points

Weapons

Name	Atk. Bonus	Dmg/Type
Dory	+6 vs AC	1d6 + 4 (piercing)
Dory	+6 vs AC	1d6 + 4 (piercing)
Pike	+6 vs AC	1d10 + 4 (piercing) range (10ft)
Light Crossbow	+6 vs AC	1d8 + 4 (piercing) range (80/320)

Character Backstory

Orelle was born beneath storm-dark skies, and misfortune followed her from her first breath. Her parents died mysteriously while she was young, leaving only fragments of a family history she never understood.

She found purpose at sea, serving aboard ships that defended Thylea's coasts and training as a hoplite. Spear, shield, and the discipline of her crew gave her something solid to trust.

Yet the omens remained. During lonely watches she heard voices beneath the waves, dreamed of threads stretched between the stars, and sometimes glimpsed moments before they happened. Unknown to Orelle, the blood of Sydon runs through her veins, binding her doom to Thylea itself.

As the visions grow darker, they draw her toward the Temple of the Oracle, seeking answers about the fate waiting for her.

Appearance

Age	Height	Weight
27 years	1.68 m	59 kg

Skin	Eyes	Hair
sun kissed, warm olive	Storm-grey	long, wavy black hair

Personality Traits

- I stay calm in danger, because panic gets people killed.
- I trust omens, dreams, and strange signs more than coincidence.

Ideals

- Duty. If fate has chosen me, I will not run from it.
- Protection. My shield is for those who cannot raise one themselves.

Bonds

- I am bound to the sea, my crew, and the coasts I swore to defend.
- My fate is tied to Thylea, whether I understand it or not.

Flaws

- I believe every misfortune may be a sign of my doom.
- I hide my fear behind discipline and stubborn courage.

Epic Path & background

The Doomed One

Orelle was born beneath ill omens, a sea-born siren haunted by visions, prophecy, and a fate she never chose. Trained as a disciplined hoplite, she now learns that her doom may be tied to her hidden descent from Sydon.

Sailor

Before prophecy claimed her, Orelle belonged to the sea. The ship was her home, her crew her family, and the wind and salt her constant companions. With black wings, taloned feet, and a calm gaze toward the horizon, she learned to survive storms, guide others through fear, and protect those who sail beside her.

SHIP'S PASSAGE

You can usually secure free passage aboard a sailing ship for yourself and your companions. In return, you may be expected to assist the crew during the voyage. The DM determines the route, schedule, and conditions of travel.

Treasure and gold

10 GP

Allies & Organisations

Stowed Items

fighter equipment

studded leather, half plate 2x Dorata, shield, light crossbow 20 crossbow bolts, explorer's pack additional equipment

Belaying pin (club), 50ft silk rope, 50ft hemp rope, lucky charm, common clothes, belt pouch

Full Backstory

Orelle was born beneath storm-dark skies, on a night when the sea rose higher than the harbor walls and the gulls fled inland as if chased by some unseen terror. Her mother always said the waves were singing when she came into the world, though never in joy. Among sirens, omens are not easily ignored, and Orelle's birth was remembered by those who had seen the black clouds gather over the coast that night.

She was raised among the people of the sea, between salt-stained docks, temple bells, and the endless cry of wings over the water. Like many sirens, she carried an old sorrow in her heart, a longing for things she had never seen and losses she had never personally suffered. Yet Orelle was not content to simply mourn. She wanted purpose. She wanted discipline. She wanted to stand between danger and those who could not defend themselves.

That is why she joined the ranks of the coastal hoplites.

The city needed warriors who could fight from ships, defend harbors, and hold narrow gangways against pirates, monsters, and raiders. Orelle learned to brace herself behind a shield while the deck rolled beneath her feet. She learned to throw a dory into the chest of a charging foe, to lock shields with her companions, and to keep formation even when fear whispered that death was close. The spear became an extension of her body, the shield a promise made to those standing beside her. She was not merely a sailor, and not merely a soldier. She became both: a sea-born hoplite, trained to guard the coasts of Thylea from whatever crawled from the waves or descended from the sky.

But the omens never truly left her.

At first, they came as dreams. Three women singing at the edge of the world. A thread stretched between stars. A storm-crowned figure standing in the depths below her, watching through eyes of lightning. Sometimes, while keeping night watch aboard a ship, Orelle heard voices beneath the sound of the waves. They did not speak clearly, but she understood enough to know they were calling her by name. Other times, in the moment before battle, she saw flashes of things that had not yet happened: a spear breaking, a companion falling, blood on white feathers, a shadow passing over the world.

Orelle tried to ignore these visions. Sailors are superstitious by nature, and hoplites are taught not to hesitate. But the signs grew worse. Fortune turned strangely around her. Ropes snapped when she passed. Lamps guttered in calm air. Strangers made warding signs when they looked too long into her eyes. Once, during a storm, lightning struck the mast above her and left her unharmed, though the wood around her burned black.

Seeking answers, Orelle began to investigate her lineage. Old records, temple fragments, and whispered stories led her toward a truth no one in her family had ever spoken aloud: somewhere in her bloodline was the mark of Sydon, one of the ancient Titans of Thylea. She does not yet fully understand what that means, nor how deeply it binds her to the old powers of the world. But the revelation terrified her. If the voices were real, if the dreams were warnings, then her life was not simply cursed by bad luck. It was part of something much larger.

The final omen came in a dream so vivid that she woke with saltwater on her lips.

She saw Thylea drowning beneath a black sky. She saw a monstrous shape rising from ruin and storm. She saw her own death, ugly and spectacular, reflected in the eyes of the world. And above it all, she heard a voice whisper that her doom and the doom of Thylea were woven from the same thread.

Since then, Orelle has known only one certainty: fate is moving toward her.

Now she travels to the Temple of the Oracle, not as a hero seeking glory, but as a sailor following the only star left in the sky. She does not yet know whether she has been chosen, cursed, or condemned. She only knows that the Oracle may understand the visions, the voices, and the doom that waits for her.

Orelle fears death, but she fears uselessness more. If her fate is tied to the fate of the world, then she will meet it with spear in hand, shield raised, and her song carried over the battlefield like a warning to the gods themselves.